EVERYONE ON THE TRAIN

The goose Amaranta had not slept much that night, the excitement of the upcoming train journey had kept her awake.

Fox's note had arrived only a few days before:

"Dear Amaranta, the desire to celebrate is great. Join me as soon as possible and bring a basket of apricots!"

So Amaranta went down to the courtyard and picked the apricots, which were ripe enough, put on her hat and walked towards the station.

But on the way she met Filomena the cat.

"Where are you going?"

"I'm going to see Fox!"

"That's nice, I can come too, I haven't seen her for so long."

"Of course," said Amaranta, "but first I must check the letter:

Dear Amaranta, the desire to celebrate is great. Join me as soon as possible and bring a basket of apricots! If you meet Filomena cat, tell her the swing is waiting for her, tell her to set off soon and join the crew!"

Filomena took her suitcase, her pearl necklace, which is always needed on the swing, and taking Amaranta under her arm, they headed for the station.

After a few steps, however, they met Egisto the dog and Arduino the wolf intent on reading the newspaper.

"Good morning"

"Good morning where are you going?"

"We are going to take the train to see Fox"

"What a nice idea I would like to come too" said Arduino.

"Let's check the letter" and putting their little heads together they read in chorus:

"Dear Amaranta, the desire to celebrate is great. Join me as soon as possible and bring a basket of apricots! If you meet Filomena cat, tell her the swing is waiting for her, tell her to set off soon and join the crew! The Arduino wolf, my dear friend, is invited of course because I must embrace him tightly!"

"I'll get ready at once!" he said, putting on his bow tie and grabbing his umbrella, just in case.

"Have a good trip," said Egisto, lifting his head from the newspaper.

All three set off and met Gina the Hen with her three chicks, Paco, Paolo and Paride intent on playing hide and seek behind a daisy bush.

"Oh what lovely company where are you going?"

"We are going to see Fox!"

"Oh Fox dear I haven't seen her for so long, I would love to come with you! "Let's check it out right away!"

Arduino said, gesturing for Amaranta to check the letter.

Amaranta cleared her throat and almost sang:

"Dear Amaranta, the desire to celebrate is great. Join me as soon as possible and bring a basket of apricots! If you meet Filomena cat, tell her the swing is waiting for her, tell her to set off soon and join the crew! The Arduino wolf, my dear friend, is invited of course because I must embrace him tightly! My sweet friend Gina who is a little sister to me, I await her here with joy already jumping and pawing!"

Gina packed her suitcase, put Paride the youngest in the pram, then turning to Paco and Paolo she said:

"Well my chicks get ready too! You're going to Grandma's by train today, it's the first stop!" They all set off again and finally arrived at the station. The train was already standing on the platform and every now and then let out a whistle to call the stragglers back.

As soon as they had boarded, the doors closed and the train departed.

Gina, making the usual recommendations, greeted Paco and Paolo, who prepared to get off at the first station.

As soon as they got off, they all looked out of the windows to say goodbye and the journey began again, rolling hills, trees and towns out of the windows and finally here was Fox's house, there was even the village band to welcome them and the party began!

And now you
